Reciprocal Exchange FAQ

SAGEHILL INSURANCE

WHAT IS A RECIPROCAL EXCHANGE?

A reciprocal exchange is different from more traditional insurance carriers because it's owned by policyholders (subscribers), but managed and operated by an attorney-in-fact. Policyholders who choose a reciprocal exchange are joining a group of responsible homeowners who each own part of the company.

WHAT IS A LIMITED POWER OF ATTORNEY FORM AND WHY IS IT NEEDED?

A reciprocal insurance exchange is owned by its subscribers – the policyholders. However, the attorney-in-fact manages the day-to-day operations. A Limited Power of Attorney form is required to authorize the attorney-in-fact to manage the company on behalf of the policyholders. This form restricts the scope of the attorney-in-fact's powers to specific actions needed to run the insurance exchange.

WHAT IS SURPLUS CONTRIBUTION?

Surplus is the excess capital that insurance carriers must keep as a method of maintaining funds in anticipation of future loss costs that may need to be paid. Since reciprocal exchanges are subscriber-owned, surplus comes from the policyholders themselves. As each subscriber joins the exchange, a surplus contribution is required. These surplus contributions are calculated as a percentage of the policy premium.

WHY IS THE SURPLUS CONTRIBUTION NOT LISTED AS PART OF THE POLICY PREMIUM?

Although calculated as a percentage of premium, the surplus contribution is not part of the policy premium. It will be separately identified as surplus contribution on the subscriber's billing statement. The subscriber will be required to pay their "Total Policy Premium" and the "Surplus Contribution," which is noted as the "Grand Total" of monies due the company. In the event of a mid-term cancellation, the reciprocal exchange will return the surplus contribution to the subscriber on a pro-rata basis, the same way as premium is returned.

WILL SUBSCRIBERS EVER BE ASKED TO PAY MORE SURPLUS CONTRIBUTION?

Subscribers are required to pay their surplus contribution on their policy to join the reciprocal exchange. The company may alter that amount upon renewal, either up or down, depending on the need to maintain adequate surplus. However, subscribers will only be responsible for the premium and surplus contribution as stated in their policy. The policy is non-assessable and subscribers will incur no contingent liability related to their ownership in the reciprocal exchange.

IS A RECIPROCAL EXCHANGE STATE REGULATED?

The reciprocal exchange is regulated by the state and is subject to the same laws, regulations and capital requirements as every other domestic insurance company. The company uses a strong and conservative catastrophic reinsurance methodology to assign financial strength ratings. Reinsurance is purchased to satisfy the requirements of Demotech to achieve an A, Exceptional*, rating.

*Regardless of the severity of a general economic downturn or deterioration in the insurance cycle, insurers earning a Financial Stability Rating® of A possess exceptional financial stability related to maintaining surplus as regards policyholders at an acceptable level. | SageHill Reciprocal Exchange FAQ | Effective 4/30/2024
